

University Communications

UNIVERSITY OF OREGON

Workplace News you can use

Get your news every Tuesday @ 2

Workplace is an official source of news for University of Oregon employees. Information is published on the Oregon News website and a weekly newsletter is sent to all employees with a singular focus – sharing information you need to do your job and to engage in all the university has to offer.

Don't miss out.

- Bookmark news.uoregon.edu/workplace in your internet browser for advance access to newsletter stories.
- Open and read each edition.

Can't find Workplace?

- Search your inbox for workplace@uoregon.edu.
- Check your junk folder and report the email as “not junk” if you find it there.
- For New Outlook users, check your Other tab and move Workplace to your “Focused Inbox” for future delivery.

Share your ideas and feedback.

- Email workplace@uoregon.edu with story ideas or a UO topic you want to learn more about.
- Constructive feedback is always welcomed.

Truck will power orientation during Aug. 7 electrical tests

How preparations for the UO-wide testing became a case of Ducks helping Ducks

Transition to UOmail nears completion for university

The email consolidation will move remaining role accounts, retirees off Webmail this year

Media Mentions

'Why A Wheaties Box Is As Good As Gold For Olympic Athletes,' Forbes, T. Bettina Cornwell, Philip H. Knight Chair and professor of marketing

'Welcome to the Weirdest Era,' Wired Magazine, Whitney Phillips, assistant professor of journalism

Home opener football tickets discounted for faculty and staff

Offer provides special pricing for tickets purchased in pairs or sets of four with a concession credit

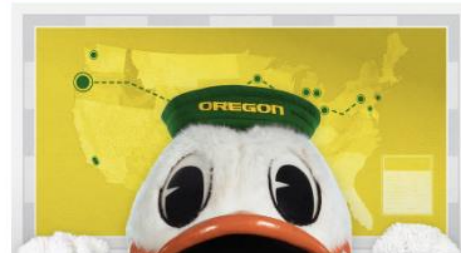

Staff can share thoughts on getting to and around campus

The transportation plan provides strategic guidelines on future sustainable travel options

'Best Solar Companies 2024,' USA Today Homefront, Ihab Elzeyadi, professor of architecture

'UO researchers study how cleats could contribute to disproportionate number of ACL tears in female athletes,' Oregon Public Broadcasting, Mike Hahn, professor of human physiology, and Emily Karolidis, PhD candidate

UO's Big Move to the Big Ten

'UO Chamber Choir wins big at World Choir Games,' Oregon Public Broadcasting, Sharon Paul, Robert M. Trotter Chair of Music

Events

Aug. 6-10: UO Surplus public sale